

LBJ School of Public Affairs - Policy Research Project (PRP)

The RGK Center for Philanthropy and Community Service considers collaborative research projects with external partners to address nonprofit or cross-sectoral issues. PRPs are faculty-led, nine-month courses for teams of 10-20 LBJ School of Public Affairs graduate students to conduct research and develop material to meet a deliverable or investigate a defined problem proposed by a nonprofit or public sector client.

Interested clients should review sample PRP projects here and contact the RGK Center no later than February to discuss projects that would begin in September and go through May/June of the following year. The RGK Center recommends completing and e-mailing the form below to <http://www.rgkcenter.org/connect> or contacting the lead faculty member directly.

- Name of organization
- Website
- Contact name
- Title
- E-mail
- Phone
- Proposed project focus

Describe project purpose, relevant background and expected outcome/deliverables (1-5 paragraphs)

- Project budget

Indicate funds available to conduct the research project. PRP budgets range from $15,000 – $45,000 and may include faculty salary, student travel, survey incentives and/or focus group expenses, among other costs.

- Questions